The Pasco County Utilities: (PCU) Cross Connection Control Program's purpose is to ensure the safety and quality of the public water supply by preventing cross connections and protecting against backflow. A key element to achieve this is the use of backflow preventers.

Backflow is the sudden reversal of drinking water once it has entered the private plumbing of a home, business or commercial property trying to force its way back into the county pipes. A backflow preventer is a device installed on your plumbing system right after your water meter. This ensures that water flows forward and prevents the water from reversing direction and allowing possibly harmful bacteria, pollutants, or toxins back into the drinking water system. Pasco County is committed to ensuring the quality of your drinking water. A cross-connection is an actual or potential connection between the drinking water supply and other water or fluids of unknown quality. An example of this might be reclaimed water, a well, swimming pool, or pond water. A cross-connection has the potential to contaminate the drinking water supply. Therefore, no cross-connections between potable water and any other water source are permitted.

To submit a test report or to become a registered backflow tester with Pasco County Utilities please submit a valid tester certification and test kit calibration report to backflowprogram@mypasco.net.

Pasco County 'Curious' Facts: Pasco County as the highest number of Residential Nudist Resorts in the United States. The county boasts the largest nudist and clothing-optional communities in North America, with 12 different resorts to choose from. That means everything from posh resorts and low-key RV parks, to year-round activities that cater to anyone wanting to bare it all. You don't have to be a nudist per se to experience what it's all about. You'll find college students, empty-nesters and bucket-listers all looking for some liberating adventures of their own — as well as nudists (also known as naturists).

Al Pacino played Benjamin "Lefty" Ruggiero in "Donnie Brasco," a movie based on the Mafia being ran out of Port Richey. In the late 1970s early 1980s the FBI called its Pasco presence "Operation Coldwater," in honor of an alleged low-level thug of the Gambino crime family named James Vincenzo Acquafrredda in New Port Richey. Undercover agents got in on the ground floor with the Mafia and worked on the case for years.

The cameras rolled as Rossi and another agent, "Donnie Brasco," reeled in their fish. On March 26, 1980, they caught a mid-sized one when a lieutenant of the Bonanno family named Benjamin "Lefty" Ruggiero paid a visit. Soon after, the feds ended Coldwater. The evidence they had gathered contributed to indictments in New York and Milwaukee. In April 1983, a federal grand jury in Tampa indicted a dozen more members. Agent "Donnie Brasco" went on to write a book by that title, which became a Hollywood movie starring Al Pacino as Lefty.
